pler a few minutes after 10 o'clock, the Berengaria arrived at 11 and the Coronis sailed at noon. Dense fogs had delayed both the incoming vessels, particularly the Berengaria, which had to slow down her speed for nearly a day. It was estimated that more than 10,000 pieces of baggage, aside from several thousand passengers, were handled on the piers in a few hours.

Among those returning on the Berengaria were M. H. De Young, owner of the San Francisco Chronicle, who was completing his fortieth trip across the Atlantic. He was accompanied by his son-in-law and daughter. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Cameron of San Francisco, and admitted that he desired to get home as soon as possible because of the coming elections, in which, he said, he was greatly interested. Mr. De Young said he returned from France convinced that Premier Policiers is not a diplosaid he returned from France convinced that Premier Poincare is not a diplo-

Kingdon Gould also was aboard the vessel. He went overseas on the same ship on May 30 with nis father, George J, Gould. He said his father was in "fair" health and was stopping with his brother, Howard Gould, in London. Mr. Gould said he returned to take care of his father's interests during the summer.

Mr. Gould said the hopelessness of the poor in London impressed him during his short visit, as there are 1,500,000 persons out of work, with apparently nothing in sight.

Dr. John T. Dorrance, head of the Dr. John T. Dorrance, head of the Campbell's Soup Company, who arrived with his wife after a trip through the Balkans, Austria and Germany, said he found labor conditions much better than he had expected. He went abroad to make a survey for Secretary of Labor Davis and said he could not talk freely until he had made a report.

Other passengers were Adamo Didur of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Joel Feder and Mrs. Feder, Miss Natalie McRuder of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Lewis Dunham of 300 Park avenue and Madison, N. J.

Guessing Greeks Identity.

The chorus is guessing at the identity of the Greeks when Rhesus' charloted enters, lamenting the slaying of his master. Hector silences his accusations. A vision of the mountain muse appears and mourns over the body of Rhesus Her long and beautiful lament appears to be closing the play with a tragic note, but Hector arouses fresh courage and the cry. "To arms," echoes down the Trojan lines as the curtain falls.
